Murder.

Derby.—On the 23rd May last, Captain James Middleton Rickinson, and Chandos Shenton, accompanied by a chinaman named Chan You, landed on the mainland from the schooner "Pearl," which was lying at anchor in Muddy Bay, Pearl Pass, for the purpose of procuring water, &c. A party of natives who had previously been on board the schooner were on shore, and assisted in carrying water to the dingey. Suddenly the natives turned on Rickinson and Shenton, and although the latter shot one dead, both were ultimately murdered before they could reach the boat. The natives then attacked the chinaman (who had remained in the boat), but he succeeded in escaping with a slight wound. They then ransacked the schooner, and before the remainder of the crew returned from pearl fishing, had carried off a large quantity of provisions, clothing, &c.

The chinaman (Chan You) can identify several of the natives, and gives the names of three as "Charley," "Harry," and "Daly." ^{A1/045.}

Murder.

Derby.—On the 23rd May last, Captain James Middleton Rickinson, and Chandos Shenton, accompanied by a chinaman named Chan You, landed on the mainland from the schooner "Pearl," which was lying at anchor in Muddy Bay, Pearl Pass, for the purpose of procuring water, &c. A party of natives who had previously been on board the schooner were on shore, and assisted in carrying water to the dingey. Suddenly the natives turned on Rickinson and Shenton, and although the latter shot one dead, both were ultimately murdered before they could reach the boat. The natives then attacked the chinaman (who had remained in the boat), but he succeeded in escaping with a slight wound. They then ransacked the schooner, and before the remainder of the crew returned from pearl fishing, had carried off a large quantity of provisions, clothing, &c.

The chinaman (Chan You) can identify several of the natives, and gives the names of three as "Charley," "Harry," and "Daly." ^{A1/0405.}
