QUINQUINA DUBONNET.—This is the name of a tonic wine made solely from old Muscat wine and Mexican Quinquina, and it is claimed that it has an average daily sale, in those countries where it has been brought prominently under public notice, totalling 26,500 bottles. The published testimonials and certificates tend to show that the wine has very special value as a tonic in all cases of nervous depression, debility, poverty of blood, physical and mental fatigue, impaired digestion—in fact, in all cases where tone requires to be restored to the system in order to ensure mental and physical vigour and ordinary enjoyment of life. It is also said by the Paris Figaro to be "One of the most energetic combatants in the fight against alcoholism," and it has so far received the stamp of approval from the French military authorities that placards contrasting the benefits attending its use with the disadvantages of the excessive use of alcohol are posted upon all the barracks of the garrison.
